Say It Now.

Some one we know is going to die some time.

Their good deeds will appeal to us, and will be emphasized by the death that overtakes our friends.

Before the grass begins to grow over them we will have many kind words to say of them. Their sterling qualities will be extolled, and their faults will be overlooked or forgotten. That is the way of the world.

But it might be different. We might commend their good qualities while they are here to reap the benefits of that commendation.

A kind word means much to those who are striving to do right. It encourages them to remain steadfast in their laudable undertakings, to persevere in the path of honor, and to extend a helping hand to others who need enlightenment.

Say it to them in life. They can't hear you when dead.

Coleman-Watson.

Of especial interest to a wide circle of friends and relatives of the groom at this place and elsewhere, was the marriage of Mr. Lester B. Coleman, son of Mrs. D. B. Coleman to Miss Mabel G. Watson, which was solemnized at the home of the bride in Darmonth, N. C., on Wednesday evening, May 3rd.

Immediately following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Coleman left for Kansas City, Mo., their future home, where Mr. Coleman is associated with the Pathe Moving Picture Corporation as head bookkeeper in their offices in that city. En route they stopped over in Dickson and spent a short while with the groom's relatives and friends, who showered many hearty congratulations of best wishes upon them for a blissful journey of wedded life.

The groom is a Dickson boy, having been reared in our midst, and is a young man of many admirable traits. During the past few years he has been in other climes and has "made good" wherever he has been fit to cast his lot—so it is needless to predict that he has chosen wisely in selecting his helpmate. Mr. Coleman is of a prominent family and is possessed of a charming personality.

RAILROAD RATES and "TRAFFIC UNITS"

Present freight and passenger rates are necessary because of present railroad expenses, not because of large railroad profits. In 1921, the N. C. & St. L. Ry., with the second largest receipts in its history, lost money.

In 1917, the average amount received by the Railway for hauling one ton of freight one mile was 1.02 cents. In 1921 it was 1.47 cents, an increase of 45.5%. Transportation costs per unit of service rendered in the same period increased about 81.6%.

Hauling a ton one mile is a "traffic unit." Carrying three passengers a mile is counted as an equivalent unit. For each dollar paid out the N. C. & St. L. in 1917 moved 132 of these units; in 1921, only 72 units.

Most railroad expenses are fixed by factors beyond the control of the railroad: wages by the United States Railroad Labor Board, the price of materials and supplies by market conditions. Every economy is being practiced to reduce expenses, and all railroads have applications before the Labor Board for a reduction in wages.

Until railroad operating expenses are reduced so that more units of traffic can be moved for each dollar that the public pays as rates, railroad rates cannot be reduced without peril to the public interest in an efficient transportation system.
